

Do you have a skill or expertise to share with our clients and participants?

Welcome to Kent State's Lifelong Learning!

We welcome your ideas for new programs and are always searching for facilitators to partner with us to offer quality educational programming. Please review the pages on this Web site for a better understanding of the types of lifelong learning programs that Kent State offers.

Kent State University develops program content in collaboration with our facilitators. Lifelong learning professionals at all eight Kent State campus locations develop and deliver these programs based on market needs and interests.

We welcome your ideas for new or existing programs. If you would like to facilitate non-credit programs for Kent State, we encourage you to complete the Facilitating a Program at Kent State Proposal Form by clicking on the "Download Form" link on the Submit Teaching Proposal Web page OR by clicking on the "Submit Course Proposal" link to submit your program information electronically.

While degrees are desirable, Kent State facilitators of non-credit programs are hired for their expertise in the subject matter, credentials related to the subject matter and for their facilitation expertise; degrees are not required for all programs offered.

Upon review of the submitted information, a Kent State lifelong learning professional will contact you if your program idea is of interest to add to our current offerings.

Kent State University program participants include employees of Northeast Ohio organizations of all sizes and in all industries, professionals seeking to enhance their skills and career opportunities, as well as adult learners seeking educational opportunities.

We look forward to receiving your program ideas and outlines!
